President’s Message
Jennifer Reynolds-Moehrle

Welcome to the 2nd issue of the 41st volume of the Accounting Historians Notebook, one of the 2 publications of the AAH section of the American Accounting Association. I am honored to be serving as President and I am fortunate to be serving alongside a terrific group of officers committed to maximizing the value of the AAH Section for the membership and broader academic community.

This is an exciting time for the AAH section as we leverage our successful past to expand our reach as a 21st century global organization. We have completed the transition from a standalone entity with the recent filing of the Academy of Accounting Historians 501c3 dissolution and the final 990. A transition team has worked diligently since late 2015 on this project and their efforts are greatly appreciated.

The Accounting Historians Journal, in its 45th year, is now published as a section journal of the AAA beginning with Volume 44 in June, 2017. The Accounting Historians Notebook has transitioned from a hard-copy publication to a 100% digital format beginning with the April 2018 edition. In the last year the decision was made to make these publications available to all AAA members.

Our section strives to recognize outstanding scholarly achievements of our members through many awards funded by generous members of the section both past and present. The upcoming cycle of award nominations and decisions will happen earlier than in prior years so please take a look at the awards page of the website and think about nominees for the various awards listed.

We also strive to encourage scholarly activities through the support of historical research conferences such as our highly innovative Spring 2019 webinar conference that you are all encouraged to take part in. Preliminary information about the webinar appears elsewhere in this issue of the Notebook.

We continue with a commitment to coordinate as wide a set of quality paper sessions as possible at the annual and regional meetings of the AAA. I would like to recognize the stellar job that Martin Persson did coordinating papers for the 2018 annual meeting and we are thankful that he has graciously agreed to continue that role for the 2019 annual meeting. In addition our VP of Partnerships, Tom King, has been working hard since the annual meeting to establish connections with regional meeting chairs and paper session coordina-

Gary J. Previts is the de Windt Professor at the Weatherhead School of Management, and a Distinguished University Professor, Case Western Reserve University. An AAA member for more than four decades, he served as President in 2007-8. His service includes national program chair in 1978 and 1990, and recently in the development of the Cook Prize and the reestablishment of Accounting Hall of Fame within the AAA. He was the head of the Ohio Region and the founding President of the Academy of Accounting Historians, a section of the AAA. Following service on the Treasury’s Advisory Committee on the Auditing Profession (2007-8), he worked with an AAA-AICPA team to establish the Pathways Commission, serving as a sponsor’s representative. He has served as a member or chair of various association committees including the nominations committee, and a special committee which established the AAA’s first website. In 2007 he received the Gold Medal for Service from the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. He is the previous recipient of similar service awards from both the Ohio Society of CPAs, where he served as President (1993-4) and from the Federation of Schools of Accountancy.

He has served as editor for a variety of refereed publications over the period 1973 to the present and is editor of the Emerald Book Series, Studies in the Development of Accounting Thought. He has served as chair or committee member on more than a dozen doctoral dissertations. At CWRU he previously served as department chair and as associate dean for undergraduates, each in turn for a decade or more.

His involvement in Federal government related policy matters includes long term service on the GAO Comptroller General’s Advisory Council and as a member of the Advisory Council of the PCAOB. He has published numerous books and papers in the areas of accounting and business history, education and financial accounting. He is coauthor, with Barbara Merino, of A History of Accountancy in the United States, a widely recognized source which provides perspective about professional accountancy. In 2011 he was inducted into The Accounting Hall of Fame.

Gary and his wife Fran have four adult children and ten grandchildren and live in Rocky River, Ohio.

AAA Glass Award Pieces

Each glass award presented by the AAA is a one-of-a-kind, kiln formed, fused glass artwork. Each piece was custom designed and hand crafted by Hungarian artist, Csaba Osvath. Csaba is a graduate student at the University of South Florida, pursuing literacy studies with a special focus on qualitative methods and arts based research. Csaba grew up and studied theology and horticulture in Hungary. For more information, visit the artist’s Facebook page.
The Accounting Historians Journal and the Academy of Accounting Historians section of the AAA are pleased to sponsor a research workshop webinar on February 22 and March 1. For each of those days, the webinar will be held from 11 am to 1 pm EST.

The theme is, Generating Accounting Theory and Knowledge from Accounting History. This theme will appeal to accounting history researchers especially those using qualitative techniques. Related papers will also be accepted for presentation.

The purpose of this research workshop is to provide detailed and insightful commentary on accounting history papers to facilitate publication in the Accounting Historians Journal and other quality journals. Each paper will be reviewed and discussed by subject experts.

Six papers are expected, with three presented on each day. Papers will be made available to participants in advance, and there will be two discussants for each presented paper.

The keynote speaker, Martin Persson of Western University, will give his paper at 11 am February 22, 2019. If you would like to present a paper, please contact Gary Sprackman of York University at garys@yorku.ca. Papers that will be or have been submitted to the AAA annual conference or regional conferences are welcome. All papers will be sent for blind review; they must be submitted by January 4, 2019.

Accounting History Research Database Now Available Through Case Western Reserve University

To access the AHRD: https://weatherhead.case.edu/research/accounting-history/

This database has been developed to assist researchers by facilitating access to published accounting history research in the English language. The Accounting History Research Database (“AHRD”) permits researching the full period and full text content of the three English language accounting history research journals. The senior journal, the Accounting Historians Journal [1974 to date] is published by the American Accounting Association; Accounting History Review (previously Accounting, Business and Financial History) dates from 1990 and is published by Taylor & Francis (UK); Accounting History dates from 1996, and is published by Sage Publications in cooperation with the Accounting History Special Interest Group of AFAANZ (Australia and New Zealand).

Taking advantage of the newest technology of data set development AHRD seeks to improve scholarly efforts by facilitating identification and access of published materials in the above journals.

Updates from Turkey
Professor Oktay Guvemli

In the fall, the Department of Accounting and Analysis at the St. Petersburg State University of Economics and the Oktay Guvemli Waqf of Accounting and Financial History organized its second internship for young scholars doing historical research of accounting reporting and finance. The purpose of the internship is to prepare young researchers to participate in the 2020 World Congress of Accounting Historians, which for the first time will take place in Russia at the St. Petersburg State University of Economics. The internship program was led by Prof. Vyacheslav Sokolov and associate professor, Elean Abdalove.

Two graduate students from St. Petersburg State University of Economics, Sergey Mysenko and Kirill Maximovich Sivodedov, participated in the internship that ran from September 28 to October 15, 2018.

Although the students had time to explore the city of Istanbul, they were involved with a number of academic activities:

- Both students performed research under the guidance of Prof. Guvemli and worked at the Waqf of Accounting and Financial History with other Turkish academicians.

- On September 29th, they attended the Turkish Accounting Historians preparations for the 100th Anniversary of the Republic of Turkey.

- They attended the 10th Anniversary Celebration of the 2008 WCAH Congress of Istanbul.

- On September 30th, they went to Edirne to attend the Trakya University Auditing Symposium where they gave a speech regarding the cooperation between Turkish and Russian academicians.

- On October 4th and 5th, they attended the 20th Turkish Accounting Congress in Istanbul and participated in the session titled,” Turkish Accounting History”.

Professor Guvemli hopes they will continue their relations with Turkish academicians and establish papers for the St. Petersburg Congress.
John Richard Edwards recently published, a new book entitled A History of Corporate Financial Reporting in Britain (Routledge). His initial intention was that the new book would serve as a second edition of A History of Financial Accounting published by Routledge in 1989, which has been widely cited in accounting and business literature. As readers are aware, over the last three decades the study of accounting history has blossomed and the volume of published literature in the late-1980s bears no comparison with what is available today. To do justice to some, but by no means the entirety, of this literature, it was decided that the text required a narrower, sharper, and deeper focus which has become A History of Corporate Financial Reporting in Britain. It is therefore a quite different book from its predecessor.

The new book is designed to provide an understanding of the procedures and practices that constitute corporate financial reporting in Britain at different points in time, and how and why those practices changed and became what they are now. Its particular focus is the external financial reporting practices of joint stock companies. This is worth knowing about given the widely held view that Britain (i) pioneered modern financial reporting, and (ii) played a primary role in the development of both capital markets and professional accountancy. The book makes use of a principal and agent framework to study accounting’s past, but one where the failure of managers always to supply the information that users desire is given full recognition. It is shown that corporate financial reporting did not develop into its current state in a straightforward and orderly fashion. Each era produces different environmental conditions and imposes new demands on accounting. A proper understanding of accounting developments therefore requires a careful examination of the interrelationship between accountants and accounting techniques on the one hand and, on the other, the social and economic context within which changes took place.

The book’s corporate coverage starts with the legendary East India Company, created in 1600, and continues through the heyday of the statutory trading companies founded to build Britain’s canals (commencing in the 1770s) and railways (commencing c.1829) to focus, principally, on the limited liability company fashioned by the Joint Stock Companies Act 1844 and the Limited Liability Act 1855. The story terminates in 2005, when listed companies were required to prepare their consolidated accounts in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards, thus signaling the effective end of British regulation of published financial reports.

The book is available for purchase on the Routledge website:

2018 Hourglass Award
Hiroshi Okano

As the sands of time pass through the funnel, when you flip the hourglass over the past becomes the future

Each year the Academy of Accounting Historians section presents the Hourglass Award to an individual who has made a demonstrable and significant contribution to knowledge through research and publication in accounting history. This year’s award was given to Professor Hiroshi Okano of Osaka City University in honor of his body of research regarding the historical, social, and organizational aspects of management accounting. Most notably for this award is his sole authored book, History of Management Accounting in Japan: Institutional & Cultural Significance of Accounting, published in 2015 and winner of the Emerald Group Publishing Award for Excellence in 2016 as an Outstanding Author Contribution to Accounting & Finance. In the preface to this work, the following observations are made by Dr. Bill Black, now editor of the Accounting Historians Journal:

“That there is a distinctive Japanese-style or approach to manufacturing management is commonly accepted; the corollary proposition that there is also a Japanese-style or approach to cost accounting is seldom considered, at least in the professional literature. For a process to succeed and an enterprise to thrive, the information available as the basis for management decision making must reflect the essential features of the process, and accordingly Japanese-style cost accounting is a key component in the Japanese manufacturing management environment. Understanding Gentan-i (standard usage per unit) as applied in Japanese companies is just one of the lessons provided in this volume.

Professor Okano provides a welcome exploration of the history and development of the culturally distinctive Japanese-style cost accounting environment and its conceptual connections with more familiar (Western) approaches to cost identification, classification, summarization and reporting. In particu-

Gary Giroux

Gary Giroux retired in 2014 after 36 years at Texas A&M University, most recently as Shelton Professor of Accounting. He has continued to write books, including Executive Compensation: Accounting and Economic Issues (2015); Accounting History and the Rise of Civilization (2017); and a revision of Accounting Fraud: Maneuvering and Manipulation, Past and Present (forthcoming). Currently, Gary is working on a blog called “Median Voter Guy” on his web (Continued on page 15)
Rachna Prakash, Ph.D., CPA, joined the Patterson School of Accountancy in 2013. Her research focuses on information publicly provided by companies to various constituents and how that information is used by capital markets. Her recent research on pricing of carbon emissions by equity markets in the U.S. has been widely cited in the business press and used by investment banks. In addition to being a regular speaker at major accounting conferences, she has a track record of invited presentations of her research work at the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board. Her research has been published in The Accounting Review, Contemporary Accounting Research, and Journal of Accounting and Public Policy. Rachna was the winner of the silver medal awarded by the Mississippi Society of Certified Public Accountants on the CPA exam in 2016.

While at A&M, Giroux wrote six books and about 70 articles, including publication in Accounting Review, Journal of Accounting Research, Accounting, Organizations & Society, and Accounting and Public Policy. His teaching included financial analysis, governmental accounting, and a number of Ph.D. courses. Gary particularly enjoyed research projects with then current and former Ph.D. students.
2017 Best Paper Award
Accounting Historians Journal

First Place:
Frances Miley and Andrew Read

At the beginning of each year, the editor of the AHJ chooses a recipient of the Best Paper Award from the previous year’s journals. This year the award is given to Professors Frances Miley and Andrew Read for their work, “Choreography of the Past: Accounting and the Writing of Christine de Pizan”, which appeared in the June 2017 issue of the Accounting Historians Journal. In the study, the authors explore “The Treasure of the City of Ladies”, a manuscript written by Christine de Pizan in France during the early fifteenth century. For Christine de Pizan accounting is a visible demonstration of one’s love of God and this educative guide to the etiquette of account-keeping and budgeting provides a religious imperative for all accounting and accounting-related functions. The authors include an extremely useful discussion of the challenge of present-mindedness in the interpretation of historical accounting records. In this study they have included enough background to Christine de Pizan and the circumstances that led to her writing to construct a picture of her experiences, values and motivations, based on verifiable sources, to reduce the present-mindedness when interpreting her writings.
Award for Excellence:
Ellen Lippman and Martin McMahon

The editor of the AHJ selects two papers to be recognized for Awards of Excellence. The first of the two for the 2017 year is “Professionalism and Politics in the Procurement Process: United States Civil War Early Years” by Ellen Lippman and Martin McMahon. The authors analyze the procurement process and its challenges during the early years of the Civil War, when the military force grew from a population of approximately 16,000 men to an estimated 2,000,000 by the war’s end 4 years later. The study examines the rush to obtain a large number of supplies early on, the eventual implementation of formalized internal controls, and the adoption of the False Claims Act to punish frauds carried out by procurement officers and outside contractors. The authors find that politics played a small role in the procurement but a larger role in oversight of the procurement department.

Ellen Lippman holds the John Becic Distinguished Professorship in Accounting position at the University of Portland's Pamplin School of Business. She earned her B.A. from Colorado College, her M.S. in Accounting from the University of Wisconsin (Madison), and her Ph.D. in Accounting from the University of Oregon. She is a CPA and specializes in teaching financial accounting and auditing. Her research considers the ethical frameworks of accountants and the accounting controls that monitor ethical behavior. Her recent publications in this area include the Journal of Business Ethics, the Accounting History Journal, the AICPA Professor-Practitioner Cases, the Accounting Historians Journal, the CPA Journal, and the Journal of Critical Incidents. A previous article won the Innovation in Accounting History Education award (2009).

Martin is a Senior Auditor at the Oregon Health & Science University conducting financial and operational audits of university programs. He earned a BBA in Accounting from the University of Portland in May 2014. He previously held internal audit positions at KPMG and Corvel Corporation with a primary focus on assessing internal controls over financial reporting. He also served in the US Army as an infantryman attaining the rank of sergeant while completing two tours of Iraq. He is a Certified Public Accountant, Certified Internal Auditor, and Certified Fraud Examiner. His research interests include historical accounting practices during war, internal controls over financial reporting, and ethical dilemmas faced by accountants.
Award for Excellence:
C. Richard Baker

The second Award of Excellence is given to C. Richard Baker for his work, “The Influence of Accounting Theory on the FASB Conceptual Framework”. Prior to the creation of the Financial Accounting Standards Board, the “accounting theory” developed by accounting scholars and academics provided the primary basis for the practice and teaching of financial accounting in the United States. Since the development of the FASB Conceptual Framework in the early 1970s, the primary basis for accounting practice and teaching of financial accounting has been the framework itself. This paper traces the influence of accounting theory on the Conceptual Framework and explores some of the consequences of this influence.

C. Richard Baker is Professor of Accounting in the School of Business at Adelphi University, Garden City, New York. His main research interests focus on the history and current regulatory structure of the public accounting profession, in particular ethical issues, legal liability, independence, and comparative systems of professional regulation. Professor Baker received his doctorate from the University of California, Los Angeles and he is a Certified Public Accountant in New York State. He has published in leading academic journals such as The Accounting Review, Abacus, Journal of Accounting and Public Policy, European Accounting Review, Accounting History, Journal of Accounting Historians, Journal of Business Ethics, Human Relations, Accounting, Auditing and Accountability Journal, Critical Perspectives on Accounting, and International Journal of Accounting.
