President's Message

I hope you are all planning to attend the 2007 APLG Midyear Meeting in lovely San Diego. Mark your calendars and make your reservations now. The meeting is February 11–13, 2007 at the Marriott Mission Valley.

The Marriott Mission Valley is just steps from a San Diego trolley stop to downtown San Diego. Nearby attractions include Historic Old Town, the Gaslamp Quarter District, the San Diego Zoo, SeaWorld, the San Diego Mission and Balboa Park.

The theme for this year's APLG/FSA mid-year meeting is, "Effective Academic Leadership: Meeting the Challenge." Marty Wartick and Larry Walther have planned an excellent meeting that should prove valuable to program leaders as well as department chairs. We also have a great new accounting chairs program planned by Tom Howard. The new chairs seminar will kick off Sunday morning with a buffet breakfast at 7:00. The full APLG/FSA program will begin at 1:00.

As accounting program leaders we face some challenges that are unique. We are educating students to enter a profession that truly is the "language of business." Accounting professionals must have excellent knowledge of technical issues in accounting, auditing and taxation. They also must have the communication and interpersonal skills needed to convey information to others who lack an understanding of these issues. In addition, they must be able to create new opportunities and add value to the organizations they represent. Our responsibilities as program leaders include not only facilitating a high quality education for students, but providing assurance to ourselves and our constituents that we are in fact doing so.

Accounting department chairs also are responsible for generating financial support for their programs to allow us to compete in a national and international market place for faculty and students and to offer programs of the quality our constituents expect.

Accounting programs must be accountable and responsive to the needs of businesses that recruit our students, to alumni who support our programs, to state and national regulatory bodies as well as meeting the needs of our individual colleges and universities. Our hope is that the sessions at this year's meeting will provide you with additional ideas and tools to help meet the many challenges you face.

Some topics include: What makes a good department chair—views from faculty and administration? How do you deal with rejoining the faculty in a non-leadership position? How do we prepare our students for leadership positions in business and society? We also have a session on media relations featuring Mr. David Margulies, head of the Margulies Communications Group, an award-winning public relations agency. The Margulies Communication group has provided counsel and advice on dealing with sensitive media issues to a wide variety of clients including Fortune 500 companies.

The President of the American Accounting Association, Shyam Sunder will discuss accounting faculty evaluations and offer thoughts regarding a broader base for considering the value of faculty contributions. Mike Diamond will head up a talk focusing on the role and relevance of accounting research. We also have sessions on accreditation issues facing large and small schools, accounting honors programs, master's and doctoral accounting program issues and community building. We hope that department chairs as well as other program leaders will plan to attend the program. I look forward to seeing you there!

More details on the meeting are provided on the AAA web link to the APLG meeting: <http://aaahq.org/aplg/seminars/2007/hotel.htm>. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or suggestions.

Minutes of Board of Governors' Meeting

August 6, 2006 — Washington, D.C.

Kent St. Pierre, president of the APLG, called the Board of Governors' meeting to order at 10:20 a.m., Sunday, August 6, 2006 at the Marriott Wardman Park in Washington, D.C. The following Board members (incoming and outgoing) attended this meeting: Fran Ayres, Allen Boston, Greg Carnes, Bud Fennema, Lee Knight, Bette Kozloski, Gerry Lobo, Lydia Rosencrants, Kent St. Pierre, Paula Thomas, Marty Wartick, and Doug Ziegenfuss.

Minutes

The Board discussed and approved the minutes of the February 12, 2006 meeting in San Antonio, Texas.

Treasurer's Report

Treasurer Doug Ziegenfuss distributed a cash flow budget for fiscal year 2007, with comparative data for fiscal year 2006. Budgeted amounts for fiscal year 2007 were the same as 2006 except for the following:

- $3,000 decrease in cash inflows from registration fees
- $1,600 increase in cash inflows from interest earned
- $800 decrease in cash outflows for the newsletter
- $300 increase in cash outflows for mid-year meeting printing costs
- $10,000 decrease in cash outflows for mid-year meeting hotel
- $5,000 increase in cash outflows for mid-year meeting speakers

The net increase in budgeted cash flows from fiscal year 2006 to fiscal year 2007 was $4,100.

The 2007 budgeted changes largely reflect changes in actual net cash flows for fiscal year 2006. Fran Ayres advised against decreasing the hotel budget by $10,000 because the site for the 2007 meeting, San Diego, is a higher cost city than San Antonio.

Doug also distributed a cash flow report comparing monthly cash flows for September 2005 through June 2006. Bud Fennema suggested that the Board would find the report more useful if it provided annual, instead of monthly, comparative cash flow data. Doug agreed to recast the report and email it to Board members after the AAA meeting.

The Board discussed the APLG's growing cash balance but reached no consensus on its disposition. Increased speaker fees and hotel costs for the 2007 annual meeting will absorb some of the excess cash. The Board also authorized Greg Carnes to purchase a new digital camera for the group.

Department Chair Handbook

Greg Carnes converted the handbook to Word and turned it over to Kevin Stocks to Word and turned it over to Kevin Stocks for updating. Kevin was not in attendance.

APLG-FSA Joint Annual Meeting

The Board reaffirmed its commitment to hold a joint annual meeting with the FSA February 11 – 13, 2007 in San Diego. Marty Wartick, APLG's program chair for 2007, reported on a number of new topics and speakers under consideration for the meeting. Other Board members provided input on topics from prior years that continue to be of interest to chairs—for example, fund raising, AACSB accreditation, and firm recruiters—and offered several new topics for consideration. The Board agreed to Lydia Rosencrants' suggestion that the meeting include an ACBSP accreditation session, probably running concurrently with the AACSB session. It also endorsed Allen Boston's suggestion of having the Big 4 chairpersons serve as keynote speakers on a rotating basis. Bette Kozloski offered to ask KPMG's chair to begin the rotation at the 2007 meeting. The Board reaffirmed its commitment to the new chairs' session and briefly discussed the idea of including a comparable session for coordinators of Ph.D. programs.

Other Discussion

The Board approved a motion by Fran Ayres (seconded by Doug Ziegenfuss) to establish an APLG membership committee. Allen Boston and others to be determined will join Fran and Doug on this committee. One of the first tasks of the committee is to obtain lists of current members, meeting attendees, and potential members. The feeling among Board members is that many program administrators are not aware of the APLG

The Board decided to reinstate its October meeting and selected Chicago and Atlanta (in that order) as preferred sites for the 2006 meeting. Fran will schedule the meeting.

Adjournment

Kent St. Pierre adjourned the meeting at 11:50 a.m.

Addendum—APLG and FSA Luncheon

The APLG and FSA agreed to continue holding joint annual meetings. The FSA will provide $10,000 to augment the program for the 2007 meeting, and it will appoint an FSA member to co-chair the program.

Jerry Trapnell of AACSB International discussed some of the activities of the AACSB and other organizations regarding the Ph.D. shortage.

Judy Rayburn, president of the AAA, and Phil Reckers discussed plans to follow up on the findings of the AAA-APLG Ad hoc Committee to Assess the Supply and Demand for Accounting Ph.D.s. Judy also suggested that coordinators of Ph.D. programs meet at the APLG-FSA annual meeting.

Reflections of a Long-Term Chair

Robert Vigeland, Texas Christian University

Lydia Rosencrants asked me to contribute a piece for the APLG newsletter on “the advantages and disadvantages of being a long-time chair.” She caught me by surprise (without a handy excuse to say no), so I agreed. (Memo to self: always keep a supply of excuses on hand.) First, let me say that I am certainly not the most obvious choice for this task. I can name several accounting department chairs who have been at it longer than I have. Second, my observations will reflect the idiosyncrasies of my career and may not be generalizable to anyone else. With those caveats, here goes.

I started my academic career at the University of Minnesota in 1977. By 1989, I was ready for a change and responded to TCU’s invitation to interview for the accounting department chair position. My administrative experience was pretty minimal at that point but I felt confident that I could probably handle the department chair’s duties in a relatively small department (10 full-time positions). I knew little about the university or its business school and agreed to visit to see what it had to offer. I received a job offer after my visit and initially turned it down. The situation I would initially encounter was not at all inviting. The department had fallen from grace with the dean and central administration and was not held in high regard by faculty in other departments in the business school or elsewhere in the university. There were four untenured assistant professors in the department. One had resigned and would be leaving before a new chair would be in place. Two were scheduled to be considered for promotion and tenure the following fall with less than promising prospects. The fourth was in her second year of employment and had not yet completed the requirements for her doctoral degree. Frankly, the situation looked rather bleak and my initial reaction was to say “no, thanks.” The dean persisted, promising me support from his office and the rest of the faculty, and generally groveled until I agreed to accept the offer.

That was more than 17 years ago and I am still at it today. The department has grown to 14 full-time positions and only two of the original 10 faculty members remain. I am presently serving under my fourth dean, not counting the 7 months I served as interim dean between dean number 3 and dean number 4. I had a full year sabbatical leave in 1999–2000 and actually resigned as department chair in 2002. There were no suitable internal candidates and after a year-long national search came up empty, the dean asked me to take the job back in 2003. With the encouragement of several of my departmental colleagues, I agreed. You’re probably thinking, “This guy has a hard time saying ‘no’.” That would be correct.

So, looking back over the past 17+ years, what are the advantages and disadvantages of having one individual serve as department chair for such a long time period? The first advantage is that nobody else gets stuck with the job. This may sound like a wisecrack but there’s some truth to it. Let’s face it; this job is not for everyone. I have some wonderful colleagues who would readily admit (and I would readily agree) that they would do a miserable job as department chair. Administration is not their strong suit and/or does not appeal to them. And why would you want to take a gifted researcher or teacher away from what they do best? I also have some colleagues who would (and one day, will) do an excellent job as department chair. The problem is they are not far enough along in their careers. I have seen several instances of associate professors serving as department chairs and the result is usually a lengthy (if not permanent) delay in their promotion to professor. I have too much respect for my younger colleagues to allow this to happen.

Another advantage is a certain administrative stability. The department faculty, dean, and provost all know what to expect in their dealings with the department chair. The same applies to external constituents such as the local accounting profession and business community. I have been fortunate to have had mostly pleasant and positive relationships with most constituencies over the years and the department has benefited. I think this administrative stability has also been helpful in our faculty recruiting efforts, particularly for experienced hires.

One potential disadvantage with a long-term department chair is stagnancy. Fortunately, I do not crave power or authority. I know I am not the only one around with good ideas and I welcome suggestions for change in policy and curriculum from my colleagues. I am also happy to delegate tasks and responsibilities to them and they are happy (mostly) to accept them. It seems to work well. Another disadvantage is the difficulty in maintaining energy and enthusiasm for the job. After all these years, I have dealt with certain issues and individuals over and over again and have grown somewhat weary of it. This is what prompted me to resign as department chair in 2002. I felt flat and thought some new ideas and energy would benefit the department. Perhaps the biggest disadvantage is what it can do to one’s career. I naively thought I would be able to continue my research interests but have found that to be far more difficult than I expected. I am now and forever will be known as an administrator. This is not how I saw my career developing but it has had its rewards. I take much satisfaction from the changes in the department that have occurred during my tenure as chair. We have grown in size and stature, and we command more respect locally and nationally.

Seventeen years ago, when my children learned about our plans to move to Texas so I could take this new job as department chair, they were understandably interested. One day, my daughter, then about to turn 4 years old, asked me, “Daddy, what does a department chair do? Does he tell everyone where to sit?” After all these years on the job, I realize that’s not such a bad job description.

UPDATE ON NASBA TASK FORCE

Jerry E. Trapnell, Executive Vice President and Chief Accreditation Officer, AACSB International

The National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA) appointed a task force last year to review responses to NASBA's previously recommended revisions to Rules 5-1 and 5-2 of its Uniform Accountancy Act. Rules 5-1 and 5-2 detail recommended educational requirements to qualify candidates to sit for the CPA examination. The Task Force, which is working in concert with NASBA's Education Committee and its chairman, continues its input and will meet again following the 2006 annual meeting of NASBA.

The Task Force will seek to finalize a framework document to be presented to the NASBA Education Committee. Following assessment of responses to a recently circulated questionnaire to all state boards of accountancy, the NASBA Education Committee intends to convene a meeting of representatives of all key academic, professional and regulatory organizations to review the revised draft recommendations. The goal is to reach consensus for the final recommendations. In addition, NASBA wishes to encourage a major collaborative project, led by the accounting profession and/or the academic community that would yield a contemporary "white paper" on accounting education.

The NASBA Education Committee presently intends to finalize, by late summer 2007, its recommendations to the NASBA Board for review and action at its 2007 fall meeting. The Task Force will insure ample due process and opportunity for input on its recommendations.

In its current draft, the significant provisions of the working framework are as follows:

- AACSB accounting and business accreditation are retained as key quality indicators for state boards of accountancy to rely upon in evaluating candidate credentials.
- The accounting component is 24 semester hours (or its equivalent) and the list of topic areas is taken directly from the Uniform CPA Examination Specification Outline. Specific courses are not recommended, content coverage is.
- The business component is 24 hours (or its equivalent) with a content list of normal business areas. Specific courses are not required.
- Provisions will likely be made for course work related to communications in accounting, research and analysis in accounting, independent study, and internships where academic credit is granted, each of which is consistent with most current programs.
- Ethics coverage continues to be a topic of discussion around the issue of a required accounting ethics class (3 hours) or allowing the option of integrating ethics across the curriculum. In support of this continuing discussion, the Task Force is exploring options on how to provide state boards' implicit assurance of such ethics coverage where a specific class is not required.

Members of the Task Force are: Billy Atkinson, PricewaterhouseCoopers (Chair); David Costello, NASBA; Judy Rayburn, University of Minnesota; Jerry Strawser, Texas A&M; Melanie Thompson, Texas Lutheran University; Jerry Trapnell, AACSB International; and Jan Williams, University of Tennessee.

AACSB International Accounting Accreditation Seminar

Maintenance Seminar
February 10, 2007
San Diego, California

Perfect for deans, accounting administrators, department chairs, faculty members, and key stakeholders of accounting programs, the seminar focuses on:

- The AACSB maintenance of accounting accreditation process, documentation, and important standards, and
- The importance of continuous quality improvement.

A Peer Review Team training session will also be offered.

The seminar will be held just prior to the 2007 APLG/FSA Annual Meeting in San Diego. To join us, visit www.aacsb.edu/conferences/events/seminars.asp.

Invitation to San Diego in February

The 2007 APLG Midyear Seminar will be a joint meeting again this year with the Federation of Schools of Accountancy. The FSA-APLG Joint Annual Meeting will be February 11–13, 2007 at the Marriott San Diego Mission Valley providing an ideal environment to network with colleagues from around the country and to explore issues related to the program theme: Effective Academic Leadership: Meeting the Challenge.

As always, the national meeting can promise a stimulating agenda enriching your understanding of emerging issues, sharing successes of other schools and providing take-aways for curriculum infusion. Don't miss this opportunity to brainstorm with fellow leaders of the profession who confront common challenges and opportunities.

You can make your travel arrangements for the Marriott Mission Valley by phone at 1-800-842-5329. Visit www.thefsa.org or <http://aaahq.org/aplg/seminars/2007/announce.htm> for more information and updates on meeting registration.

You may want to come a few days early to attend the AACSB Accounting Accreditation Maintenance Seminar on February 10. For more information, visit www.aacsb.edu/conferences/events/seminars.asp.
